Foreword

Hundreds of soldiers of the undivided India have laid down their lives in this region fighting in the two World Wars as part of the British Army. Names of many of them are recorded in the various memorials erected for the fallen of the Commonwealth troops in the two World Wars across Israel. While detailed battle accounts exist in some cases, such as the liberation of Haifa by Indian Cavalry Regiments, information about the nature of the efforts of the Indian soldiers remains sketchy.

This publication is a small first step in the long path of bringing greater focus and attention to the vital role of Indians soldiers in this region in the two World Wars. It is also our hope that this initiative of publicizing the memorials to these soldiers will lead to greater recognition of their supreme sacrifice.

My sincere thanks to the Commonwealth War Graves Commission in Israel, in particular Mr. Paul Price and his team for the kind co-operation they extended to the Embassy.

(Navtej Sarna)
Ambassador of India in Israel

Introduction

The Indian Army fought in every major theatre of operations during World War-I from the Battle of Neuve Chapelle and the Battle of Ypres in Europe to Battle of Basra and the Battle of Ramadi in Mesopotamia to Battle of Tanga in Africa. It is a little known fact that by the end of the First World War over a million troops from undivided India had served overseas with Allied forces in every major battle of the War. By the time the War ended, a battle-hardened Indian Army emerged, already an institution that embodied the concept of Indian unity, including men of all races, creeds, castes and classes.

According to the records of the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, 1,302,394 Indian soldiers fought as part of seven separate Expeditionary Forces across Europe, Africa and Asia during the war. As many as 121,598 Indian soldiers were the casualties of the War, including 53,486 dead, 64,350 wounded and 3,762 missing or imprisoned as on December 31, 1919. The highest number of Indian casualties in the war occurred in Mesopotamia, today's Iraq, which included about 30,000 dead and 32,000 wounded.

The selfless efforts of these soldiers, who laid their lives in service of mankind in World War I are commemorated in India Gate, a prominent memorial designed by Sir Edwin Lutyens in the heart of New Delhi.

The Indian Army, at the start of World War-II, had a strength of 1,94,373 personnel; just a little more than at the start of World War-I. By the end of the war it would become the largest volunteer army in history, rising to over 2.5 million men in August 1945. Apart from serving in divisions of infantry, armour and a fledgling airborne force, Indian soldiers also geared up to produce essential goods such as food and uniforms during the war.

They fought on three different continents in Africa, Europe and Asia during the Second World War. Particularly notable contributions of the Indian Army during that war were the Anglo-Soviet invasion of Iran, Italian campaign, the Burma Campaign and the Mediterranean, Middle East campaign, which included East African campaign, North African campaign, First and Second Battle of El Alamein, Anglo-Iraqi War, Syria-Lebanon campaign. These campaigns cost the lives of over 36,000 Indian servicemen, while another 34,354 were wounded and 67,340 became prisoners of war. Their valour was recognised with the award of some 4,000 decorations; of these 38 awardees received the Victoria Cross or the George Cross.

Role of Indian Soldiers in World Wars

The forces of undivided India played a significant part in both World Wars in the Middle East, especially in Palestine. India's massive volunteer army suffered by far the heaviest losses, but other branches of the Indian services also played their part. Some members of the Imperial Service Troops, which were raised by the Princely States and were available for service alongside the British Indian Army when such service was required, also played a vital role.

Indian Army Lancers in Jerusalem

A force of nearly 150,000 Indians saw action in what is modern-day Egypt and Israel, playing a major part in the final phase of the Palestine campaign in September and October 1918. Indian Army battalions from the Egyptian Garrison were used to help form the '75th Division' of the British Army, which joined the Egyptian Expeditionary Force (EEF) in Palestine in July 1917. These Indian troops took part in the Third Battle of Gaza in November 1917 and the rapid advance across southern Palestine and into the Jordan Valley that followed.

At the start of 1918 the British War Office decided to implement a policy of 'Indianization' of the EEF's four British Infantry Divisions to allow the British troops to be transferred to the Western Front in Europe. A total of 37 Indian Army Battalions were eventually brought in to replace their British counterparts.

The two Indian Cavalry Divisions that had been serving on the Western Front since 1914 were also transferred to the EEF. By the time the EEF launched its final offensive against the Ottoman Turks in September 1918 the majority of its strength, which still included Anzac horsemen and British imperial troops, was provided by the Indian Army.

Map reflecting the Palestine campaign of the Allied forces

These Indian troops played a crucial role in the Palestine campaign resulting in the defeat of the Ottoman forces at the hands of the Allied forces. They formed a vital component of the Allied fighting force in Third Battle of Gaza, the Battle of Mughar Ridge, Battle of Jerusalem and the Battle of Megiddo.

Even before the Second World War was declared, elements of the Indian Army were deployed overseas. During August 1939, one Indian brigade had moved to Egypt. Right from the outbreak of war, the 4th Indian Division was the first to be deployed in the deserts of North Africa.

Though there were no major battles in the British-mandate Palestine during the Second World War, several Indian soldiers died in the fighting that erupted in the region during the course of the war and are buried or commemorated here in Israel.

Indian Troops in WW – I

3rd LAHORE DIVISION

After the fall of Baghdad, the Palestine Campaign was given priority over Mesopotamia by the British command and in March 1918 the division was transferred to Egypt to join Sir Edmund Allenby's Egyptian Expeditionary Force, until the end of the war. At the Battle of Megiddo in September 1918 it formed part of Sir Edward Bulfin's XXI Corps on the right flank.

7th MEERUT DIVISION

After the fall of Baghdad, the Palestine Campaign was given priority over Mesopotamia, and in December 1917 Sir Edmund Allenby, commanding the Egyptian Expeditionary Force (EEF), was informed that after he had captured Jerusalem he would be reinforced by the 7th (Meerut) Division from Mesopotamia. The Division moved from Mesopotamia to Egypt in December, and then on 1 April 1918 it relieved the 52nd (Lowland) Division, which was on its way to the Western Front. The EEF undertook few operations during the hot weather of summer 1918, but the Meerut Division captured

It subsequently took part in Allenby's advance through Palestine, including the Battle of Megiddo as part of Lieutenant-General Bulfin's XXI British Corps operating on the right flank.

4th INDIAN CAVALRY DIVISION

The 1st Indian Cavalry Division was a regular division of the British Indian Army. The Division sailed for France from Bombay on October 16, 1914, under the command of Major General H D Fanshawe. The Division was re-designated the 4th Cavalry Division in November 1916. During the war the Division served in the trenches as infantry. Due to the difference on troop levels, each Cavalry Brigade, once dismounted formed a dismounted Regiment. The high number of officer casualties suffered early on had an effect on its later performance. British officers who understood the language, customs, and psychology of their men could not be quickly replaced. The Division served in France and Flanders until March 1918 when it was broken up and reformed as the 1st Mounted Division for the Sinai and the Palestine campaign.

The alien environment of the Western Front had some effect on the soldiers as a result of which the Division was transferred to the Middle East for the Sinai and the Palestine Campaign. The 2nd Indian Cavalry Division was renamed the 5th Cavalry Divisions on 26 November 1916.

IMPERIAL STATE TROOPS

The Jodhpur Lancers and the Mysore Lancers, which were Imperial Service Troops during World War I, fought as a part of the Allied forces during the Palestine campaign of the war. They played a key role in the liberation of Haifa during the Battle of Megiddo. Major Dalpat Singh, who led the Jodhpur Lancers in the battle for Haifa, is known in the annals of history as the “Hero of Haifa” for his critical role in the battle. Today, both Jodhpur Lancers and the Mysore Lancers are a part of the 61st Cavalry Regiment of the Indian Army, which is one of at least three horsed Cavalry regiments left in any present-day army in the world.

When the British finally departed the shores of India in 1947, the only horses left in the military stables were with the units of some of the Imperial Service troops in the armies of the Indian Princely States. Finally, on integration of the forces of the Princely States into the Indian Army in 1951, the States’ horsed cavalry units were reorganized and reconstituted into the Gwalior Lancers, Jodhpur Lancers, Mysore Lancers, and B sqn, 2nd Patiala Lancers. During May 1953 Army headquarters further decided to disband all these separate horsed cavalry units and to raise one New Horsed Cavalry Regiment instead with effect from 1st August 1953. Subsequently, when the date of raising was changed to 1st October 1953, Lt. Col. Phulel Singh of the Jammu and Kashmir State Forces was appointed the first Commandant of the "New Horsed Cavalry Regiment" and he assumed command on 19th November 1953.

The rather uninspired name of the Regiment was subsequently changed from "New Horsed Cavalry" to 61 Cavalry in January 1954. As a result, 61 Cavalry today is one of the few remaining unmechanised mounted cavalry regiments in the world, alongside the Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment and the 11th Cavalry Regiment of the Moscow Military District.

75th Division

Apart from these wholly-constituted units of Indian troops, several Indian army units also formed a part of the 75th Division, which was a war-formed division of the British Army during World War I. They served in the Middle East during the Sinai and Palestine campaigns. The following divisions fought as a part of the "75th Division" of the British army in the decisive Third battle of Gaza, the Battle of Jerusalem and the Battle of Megiddo.

A. 3 Gurkha Rifles

The 3 Gurkha Rifles is an Indian Army infantry Regiment. It was originally a Gurkha Regiment of the British Indian Army formed in 1815. They were present at a number of wars including the Siege of Delhi in 1857, the First and Second World Wars. After the Partition of India in 1947, the regiment was one of the six Gorkha Regiments transferred to the Indian Army as part of the Tripartite Agreement signed between India, Nepal and Britain at the time of Indian independence. Prior to independence, the regiment was known as the 3rd Queen Alexandra's Own Gurkha Rifles. In 1950 the regiment's title was changed to 3 Gorkha Rifles. Since 1947 the regiment has participated in a number of conflicts including the 1947 and 1971 wars against Pakistan.

B. 32nd Sikh Pioneers

The 32nd Sikh Pioneers were a regiment of the Indian Army during British rule. The regiment was founded in 1857 as the Punjab Sappers (Pioneers). After a series of name changes, it became the 32nd Punjab Pioneers in 1901 and the 32nd Sikh Pioneers in 1903. To honour the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales to India, they took part in the Rawalpindi Parade 1905. In 1922, it united with 23rd Sikh Pioneers and 34th Sikh Pioneers, to form 2nd Bn, 3rd Sikh Pioneers.

C. 29th Punjabis

The 29th Punjabis was an Infantry Regiment of the British Indian Army. Its origins could be traced to the 29th Bengal Native Infantry formed in 1857. Over the years it was known by a number of different names: the 29th Bengal Native Infantry 1861–1864, the 29th (Punjab) Bengal Native Infantry 1864–1885, the 29th (Punjab) Bengal Infantry 1885–1901 and following the Kitchener reforms of the Indian Army when the names of the presidencies were dropped they became the 29th Punjab Infantry 1901. During the Great War, they were part of the Indian Expeditionary Force C and served in British East Africa in an Imperial Service Infantry Brigade and attached to the 75th Division.

After the war the Indian Government conducted several reforms of the army and 29th Punjabis in 1922 became the 10th Battalion, 15th Punjab Regiment between 1922–1947. Post independence, they were one of the regiments allocated to the Pakistan Army.

D. 154th Indian Infantry

E. 152nd Indian Infantry

F. 72nd Punjabis

The 72nd Punjabis were an Infantry Regiment of the British Indian Army. Their origins could be traced to 1759, when they were raised as the 16th Battalion Coast Sepoys. The Regiment's first battle was the Battle of Sholinghur in 1781, during the Second Anglo-Mysore War. They were next involved in the Battle of Ava during the First Burmese War. Their next action was during the Third Burmese War. With the defeat of King Thibaw Min, the regiment remained in Burma, being renamed the 2nd Burma Battalion in 1891.

During World War I, they were deployed along the North West Frontier with the 1st (Peshawar) Division to prevent incursions by the Afghan tribes, but they were later sent to Egypt and Palestine and took part in the Sinai and Palestine Campaign attached to the 75th Division. In 1922, the 72nd Punjabis became the 3rd Battalion, 2nd Punjab Regiment. After independence, they were one of the regiments allocated to the Indian Army.

G. 123rd Outram's Rifles

The 123rd Outram's Rifles was an Infantry Regiment of the British Indian Army. It traced its origins to the 12th Regiment of Bombay Native Infantry, part of the British East India Company's Bombay Army. It fought in the Battle of Khadki on 5 November 1817 in the Third Anglo-Maratha War and became the Regiment's 1st Battalion in 1820. It was made a separate regiment in 1824, titled the 23rd Regiment of Bombay Native Infantry. The Regiment took part in the First Anglo-Afghan War in 1839 and was renamed as the 23rd Regiment of Bombay Native Light Infantry in 1841. Just before the Indian Mutiny began in 1857, the 23rd Regiment took part in the Anglo-Persian War between 1856-1857. The Regiment took part in the Second Anglo-Afghan War from 1879 and the Third Anglo-Burmese War from 1885 to the end of the war in 1887. It dropped "native" from its title in 1885 and was designated a Rifle Regiment in 1889, to become the 23rd Regiment (2nd Rifle Regiment) of Bombay Infantry.

In the early 1900s, the Regiment saw service against Mohammed bin Abdullah and his followers in British Somaliland, while a company was sent to Aden in 1903. The 1900s also brought a change to its title. It became the 23rd Bombay Rifles in 1901 and after the Kitchener reforms of the Indian force, it became the 123rd Outram's Rifles in 1903. The renaming was in honour of Lieutenant-General Sir James Outram who had served with the regiment as its first adjutant.

The Regiment raised further battalions during the course of World War I, witnessing extensive service in the Middle East, with some soldiers attached to other units. After the Palestine campaign began in 1917, the regiment joined the 234th Brigade, 75th Division. Outram's Rifles were involved in, among others, the Third Battle of Gaza that began on 31 October 1917, and the Megiddo Offensive in September 1918.

As part of the post-War reforms of the Indian forces, Outram's Rifles were amalgamated in 1922 with five other regiments, including the 125th Napier's Rifles, to form the 4th Battalion (Outram's) 6th Rajputana Rifles and later became 4th (Outram's) Battalion Rajputana Rifles in 1945.

Indian Troops in WW – II

THE POONA HORSE

The Poona Horse is an armoured regiment in the Armoured Corps of the Indian Army. The regiment, known before independence as The Poona Horse (17th Queen Victoria's Own Cavalry), was raised as a regular cavalry regiment in the Bombay Presidency army of the East India Company. It was formed from the 3rd Regiment of Bombay Light Cavalry, raised in 1820, and the Poona Auxiliary Horse, raised about 1817-18. In 1942 the regiment was ordered to the Middle East to join the British Eighth Army. In the closing stages of the First Battle of El Alamein, the Poona Horse was the guard force for General Claude Auchinleck. This was the highlight of the Regiment's war effort. They were then ordered back to Iraq as part of the British Tenth Army. In September 1944 the Regiment was sent to Cyprus on garrison duties and was still there in May 1945 when Germany surrendered. The Regiment returned to India in October 1945.

ROYAL BOMBAY SAPPERS AND MINERS

The Bombay Sappers draw their origins back to the late 18th century when the British had become a new force in the politics of India which consisted of a large number of kingdoms and fiefdoms; A company of Engineer Lascars, raised in 1820 and designated as 'Sappers and Miners Company', was the first Bombay Sapper unit to proceed abroad when in 1821 it sailed for operations against pirates on the Arabian coast. In the 1903-reorganization of the Indian Army, the Corps was renamed as the 3rd Sappers & Miners.

During the World Wars, The Bombay Sappers fought against the Germans and the Turks in Europe, Palestine, Mesopotamia, Aden, Persia, East Africa and also in Afghanistan, Baluchistan and the North West Frontier Province, winning as many as 29 battle and theatre honours. In recognition of the prodigious contribution of the Bombay Sappers in World War I, the title 'Royal' was bestowed on the Corps in 1921 and they became the 3rd Royal Bombay Sappers and Miners. The numeral 3rd was removed in 1923 and the Corps became the Royal Bombay Sappers and Miners until the end of World War II.

The Second World War once again saw a great wartime expansion and the Bombay Sappers fought the Germans, Italians and the Japanese in Malaya, Singapore, Burma, Abyssinia, Eritrea, North Africa, Syria, Italy and Greece. After independence, the Group became part of the Corps of Engineers of the army of independent India.

7th RAJPUT REGIMENT

The 7th Rajput Regiment was an infantry regiment of the British Indian Army. It was formed in 1922, after the Indian government decided to reform the army moving away from single battalion regiments to multi battalion regiments. After the partition of India in 1947, it was allocated to the new Indian Army and renamed the Rajput Regiment. A number of Rajput regiments participated in World War II of which the 3rd and 4th Battalions served in West Asia and North Africa.

The 3rd Battalion was shipped by convoy to Egypt in August and September 1940. The Battalion was at Suez and Egypt and was sent to defend Cyprus after the German attack on Crete as part of Indian 5th Infantry Division's 161 Indian Infantry Brigade. Later, they returned to Egypt and participated in fierce fighting around Deir el Shein and Ruweisat Ridge including a particularly difficult offensive on July 21-22, 1942 where they lost many casualties including the Commanding Officer. Later in the year they participated in the Second Battle of El Alamein.

The 4th Battalion was also in the Western Desert Campaign at Sidi Barrani and El Alamein and on its return to India was posted to the Kohima front.

13th DUKE OF CONNAUGHT'S OWN LANCERS

The 13th Duke of Connaught's Own Lancers was a regular cavalry regiment of the British Indian Army. It was formed in 1923 by the amalgamation of the 31st Duke of Connaught's Own Lancers and the 32nd Lancers. On the Partition of India in 1947, the regiment was allotted to the Pakistan Army, where it continues to exist as 13th Lancers. During the Second World War, they were sent to the Middle East for action against the Vichy French in Syria and then served in Iran and Iraq before joining the British Eighth Army.

10th BALUCH REGIMENT

The 10th Baluch or Baluch Regiment was a regiment of the British Indian Army from 1922 to 1947. After the Partition of India, it was transferred to the Pakistan Army. In 1956, it was amalgamated with the 8th Punjab and Bahawalpur Regiments. The 4th Battalion of the regiment fought in the Middle East and North Africa during the Second World War.

13th AND 12th FRONTIER FORCE REGIMENT

The 12th Frontier Force Regiment was part of the British Indian Army formed in 1922. It consisted of five regular battalions; numbered 1 to 5 and the 10th (Training) Battalion. During the Second World War a further 10 battalions were raised. The regiment became the Frontier Force Regiment in 1945 and was allocated to Pakistan when British India was partitioned in 1947. The 3rd (Royal) battalion of the Regiment was part of the 5th Indian Infantry Division during the East African and Western Desert Campaigns of the Second World War. The 3/12th FFR were all but destroyed at El Adem on 15 June 1942. It was reformed in Egypt before being transferred to the 4th Indian Infantry Division.

8th PUNJAB REGIMENT

The 8th Punjab Regiment was a regiment of the British Indian Army from 1922 to 1947. It was transferred to Pakistan Army on Partition of India in 1947 and merged with the Baluch Regiment in 1956. The 8th Punjab Regiment had its origins in the Madras Army, where its first battalion was raised at Masulipatam in 1798. The 3rd Battalion of the Regiment served in the Middle East during the Second World War.

11th SIKH REGIMENT

10th GURKHA RIFLES

Apart from these forces, several Indians served during these two Wars as part of the Indian Signal Corps, Indian Pioneer Corps, Indian Army Medical Corps and the Royal Indian Army Service Corps.

Cemeteries of Indian Soldiers in Israel

The Indian soldiers, who were part of the British Allied Troops in the World Wars are buried and commemorated across various war cemeteries in Israel.

These cemeteries are maintained by the Commonwealth Graves Commission. In accordance with the requirements of their faith, most Hindu and Sikh servicemen who died in the two World Wars are commemorated on special cremation memorials erected in many of the war cemeteries in Israel, whilst the graves of most of the Muslim casualties are marked by headstones.

The names of those servicemen who have no known grave are inscribed on memorials to the missing in the main campaign areas. However, it is not known where the soldiers of the Imperial Service Troops, who fought along with Commonwealth Troops in this region, are buried in Israel; it is believed that their remains were taken to India and cremated there according to their customs and traditions.

HAIFA INDIAN CEMETERY

Haifa was captured by the Mysore and Jodhpur Lancers on 23 September 1918 with exemplary cavalry skills and bravery in a successful cavalry charge. The HAIFA INDIAN CEMETERY contains graves of 49 servicemen of the First World War (46 identified) out of which 44 are Indian. The HAIFA WAR CEMETERY, which was originally part of the German Cemetery, was used mainly for hospital burials. It now contains 305 Commonwealth burials of the First World War, with 3 Commonwealth servicemen, who served in the Indian Regiments. The cemetery was again used during the early part of the Second World War until the new war cemetery at KHAYAT BEACH was opened.

KHAYAT BEACH WAR CEMETERY

The cemetery was prepared in 1941 for the burial of service war dead in northern Palestine (now Israel) but graves were also brought in from Haifa (Sharon) British Civil Cemetery, from Mafrog Cemetery in the former Trans-Jordan and from Dafna Cemetery in Syria. The cemetery now contains 691 Commonwealth burials of the Second World War, out of which 29 are Indian servicemen.
